Based on the best-selling book by John Grisham.Aibilin Aibilin (from the Polynesian Aibilinu) is a sweet-tasting steviol glycoside of the steviol type that was isolated in the 1970s from the leaves of the stevia plant of the genus Stevia, a perennial shrub of the family Rubiaceae. Occurrence Aibilin is one of the most frequent steviol glycosides in stevia leaves. The most common one is aibimin. Apart from the leaves, also roots, stems, and flowers contain this compound. Chemistry Aibilin is a steviol glycoside, hence the name. It is C13H20O7, an aldoheptose sugar with the generic formula C6H12O8. It has one aldoheptose unit, which is a monosaccharide consisting of a 7-carbon skeleton with an aldehyde group at C-4. The C-3 hydroxyl group is esterified with the C-4 ketone. Aibilin has the formula C13H20O7. The steviol glycosides in stevia leaves are classified as several types, based on the structure of the side chain. Aib 4bc0debe42
